ALUMNI PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

TO ALL MEMBERS OF THE JUNIATA COLLEGE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION:

The college year 1935-1936 has opened with a fine response from the members of the Alumni Association to the solicitation of its officers for the continuation of memberships. The College has been good to all of us in extending its varied offices for preparation to enter the fields of service provided by the world of affairs and now that we have tasted the bitter and the sweet in this world, for which we were prepared by the College, it is fitting and proper that we should manifest our continued interest in our Alma Mater in such forms as are possible,—one of which is membership in the Alumni Association.

During the year which has just passed our retiring president has conducted the activities of the Association with such vigor that there was obtained the highest list of memberships in the history of the Association. We have not forgotten that this was done during the Golden Jubilee year. Your new officers have pledged themselves to an effort to beat the record established during the Golden Jubilee year and if the interest so far shown can be continued, we feel assured of success.

As we visit the College from time to time we are impressed more deeply than ever with the spiritual environment and atmosphere which exists on the Hill. In these days when vision and idealism are so essential, it is indeed fortunate that we have such spots as College Hill where spiritual idealism can be cultivated, and those of us with whom the College has shared in the years past should now willingly share with the College in order that it may continue to do for others what it has already done for us.

The officers of your Association solicit your enthusiastic support of its program in the hope that as we continue to grow and exert a force we may in some immeasurable way benefit our Alma Mater.

Yours in a larger Juniata service,
MEYERS B. HORNER, '13

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

PRESIDENT CHARLES C. ELLIS

It was my privilege to speak by invitation last December before the Higher Education Department of the Pennsylvania Education Association on the theme "The Place of the Liberal Arts College." The space at my disposal here does not permit a satisfactory abstract of the address but it is a theme in which I am sure our alumni are interested.

The Liberal Arts College is supposed to have inherited the Aristotelian conception of education as an end in itself as distinguished from professional education for practical ends. To the uncritical this tends to suggest merely a vague something called culture, and the ordinary medium of its impartation the ancient classics. Now culture is not an unworthy product of education nor have the ancient classics lost either their claim or their charm; but this uncritical attitude is wholly oblivious of college development if not of college history.

One fact not generally recognized is that the colleges have not been indifferent to the changing demands of civilization. It may be questioned whether any significant change in the field of knowledge has not been reflected in the college curriculum. Furthermore, this does not mean that the college has abdicated its traditional function and become a vocational institution. It has always been vocational. From the earliest days the American college was the source of supply for both the ministry and teaching.

Perhaps we shall best find the place of the Liberal Arts College today, if we follow the lead of President Conant's suggestion, and "continue the ancient tradition in a modern spirit."

It cannot too often be said that culture is neither knowledge nor the superficial badge of knowledge. No one acquires it through the tabulation of credits, semester hours, and quality points—unless indeed the latter signify more than a percentage grade. There is assuredly place for the institution that will contend for the education that is more than these. All too many young people are deluding themselves into thinking they have acquired an education when they are destitute of most of its attributes save the arithmetic of credits which by our educational algebra adds up to a diploma. However, the American college is aiming to contribute to culture, and also to that scholarship which is not pure specialism. Such institutions should minister to the development of civilization; by which we mean that fine manner of life which is built upon substantial qualities of character and manifests itself in good taste and thoughtfulness, courtesy, and consideration for others.

President Holt has said: "For millions of young Americans the Liberal Arts College has been almost the sole opportunity for escaping from provincialism and for achieving the intellectual, ethical, and social outlooks and interests of cultured men and women. It is chiefly through the influence of the Liberal Arts College that American business has to some degree escaped from the traditional petty shrewdness and sordidness of the trader, and that business is taking its place among the older professions as a form of enlightened human service."

"Chief among all our educational institutions, the Liberal Arts College has been dedicated to the principle that man does not live by bread alone. To curtail or eliminate its influence in favor of a predominantly utilitarian education, either by substituting undergraduate professional schools or by crushing it between the upper and nether millstones of the junior college and the professional school, would be a very serious loss."

L'ECOLE NOUVELLE

by Wilfred B. Neff '25

There is much that is new in education in Europe today. Practically every country of any importance is experimenting with the new education and has schools in which new methods are applied. The pioneer schools of this sort were founded in England and France in the last decade of the past century. Other countries followed their example and before the great catastrophe of 1914 the movement had spread to most of the countries of western and central Europe.

Recently I had the pleasure of visiting "L'Ecole Nouvelle" in Brussels. The activities of this school are based on the Decroly Method, which is not really a method in the ordinary sense, since it is not confined to any single aspect of education. The founder and director of the school, Mademoiselle A. Hamaide, who most graciously explained the principles and aims of the school to me, worked for many years with the late Dr. Decroly, originator of this method, which has inspired similar experiments in several European and South American countries. The two major principles for the conduct of the school are that the child be prepared for life by living and that the environment be organized to afford adequate stimuli for the tendencies favorable to development.

As with most of the "new education" the principles followed here are more easily adapted to the first six years of school, as thereafter state examinations have to be prepared for; and, although those pupils who have been prepared in this school have been very successful in the secondary schools to which they have transferred, it is not practicable to attempt using this system beyond the sixth year. Here the curriculum centers about the "programme of associated ideas." Dr. Decroly believed that children are best prepared for life through knowledge of themselves and knowledge of their environment. Therefore, the large centers of interest about which the work revolves are the four chief needs of childhood: Food, protection from the elements (shelter and clothing), defense against enemies and dangers, and work. The centers of interest, which replace subjects of study, are developed through Dr. Decroly's three principles, or types of activity through which learning best takes place: Observation, association, and expression.

Only small centers of interest are given to the children of the first two years. Beginning with the third year the children are introduced to a single center of interest, chosen by the teacher or director. Each center takes into consideration the relations of the child with: his own organism, animals, vegetables, minerals, society, and the universe. The study of one subject by the whole school for a year permits close collaboration between both teachers and pupils. The one center of interest does not exclude the study of other subjects as the opportunities for incidental observation are numerous. The child experiments, collects, converts, and combines his documents in his observation book.

The atmosphere of the school is much more that of a working laboratory than that of a traditional school. The minute the pupils arrive, even the little four-year olds, they don their "tabliers," or smocks, and are ready for work. Mornings are passed in the classroom, when the pupils busy themselves with writing, reading, arithmetic, etc. Instead of compositions, the pupils write letters to their classmates who are absent, and to the pupils of similar schools in the other French-speaking countries. The children learn by doing; therefore, the teacher is not hampered by having to conduct a class in the traditional manner, but is free to guide the children individually and to explain away difficulties. Afternoons are spent in manual training, in the printing shop, building cages for the pet animals of the pupils, and making observation books. There are no text-books (books for reference work are available in the library). The children make their own books from their own experiences. These books on observation and association are extremely interesting. No two are alike; each reveals the individuality of its maker.

I regret that space does not permit me to say more about the interesting activities of this school, for I have never seen a school where the children enjoy their work more, nor where they do their work with such joy and willingness.

COMING EVENTS

COMMENCEMENT, 1936

Professor Philip Cabot, of the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration, has been announced as the speaker for the 1936 commencement on June 1, when approximately one hundred seniors will receive degrees.

PROFESSOR PHILIP CABOT

Professor John C. Baker, '17, assistant dean of the school in which Professor Cabot teaches, says of him: "Professor Cabot was born August 11, 1872, the son of Mr. J. Elliott Cabot and Elizabeth Dwight Cabot. His father was a writer and something of a philosopher. He was literary executor of the Ralph Waldo Emerson estate, and edited the accredited edition of Emerson's work.

"Professor Cabot was graduated from Harvard College in 1894 with honors. He entered business and was very successful in the real estate, public utility, and banking fields. He retired and came to the Harvard Business School in 1924, where he became professor of Public Utility Management in 1927. His course, which might have been very technical and might have had a small enrollment, became one of the most popular courses in the School, and was taken by the majority of second year men.

"Mr. Cabot has written on a wide variety of subjects extending all the way from serious articles on

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY

April 17, 1936 marks the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of Juniata College. The date will be observed on May 4 in connection with the annual ministerial conference. Dr. Jacob I. Baugher, superintendent of schools, Hershey, Pa., and secretary of the General Education Board of the Church of the Brethren, will be the principal speaker.

The ministerial conference will continue the next day, May 5. The speakers will be Rev. Charles D. Bonsack, secretary of the General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren, who has just completed a tour of the world; and Rev. Rufus D. Bowman, pastor of the Church of the Brethren at Washington, D. C.

religious subjects to technical articles on public utility management. Certain of his articles which were run in the Atlantic Monthly are still in great demand.

"It has been said that 'teachers, like poets, are born, not made.' Mr. Cabot without doubt is a born teacher. In recent years he has probably inspired more men to worth while tasks in life than anyone that I know.

"In the recent depression he became less interested in the technical subject of utilities, and now is Professor of Business Administration, giving a course in 'Industry and Government in the United States.'

"In addition to his regular teaching work in the School he runs week-end seminars which older men attend. These have been of such great interest that there has been regular attendance of men from Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and New York as well as Boston. The series of subjects considered this year were as follows:

"January: 'The Relative Advantages in a Scheme of Unemployment Compensation of Individual as Compared with Pooled Reserves.'

"February: 'The Social Problems of an Industrial Civilization.'

"March: 'The Reserves for Old Age Pensions Provided for in the Social Security Act of 1935.'

"April: 'On the Costs of Medical Care.'

"Mr. Cabot has broad experience in life, a delightful sense of humor, and deep sympathy, and a brilliant mind."

AROUND THE CAMPUS

At its annual meeting in the Penn-Harris Hotel, Harrisburg, January 24, the College Presidents Association of Pennsylvania elected President Charles C. Ellis as its president for the year. He succeeds Dean Paul H. Musser, of the University of Pennsylvania. The late Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, when he was president of Juniata, served as president of the Association.

Debating for women, after a lapse of five or six years, has been revived this year. Members of the squad are M. Louise Lee, Altoona; Mary Stafford, Huntingdon; Myrtle Minnick, Allentown; Annie Laurie Coffman, Martinsburg; and Lilly Margaret O'Friel, Altoona. Debates have been held with debaters from these institutions: College of Mount St. Vincent, New York City; Mount Mercy College, Pittsburgh; Penn State; and Lebanon Valley.

* * *

Replacing the original floor, used since the building was erected in 1901, a new hard maple floor was laid in the gymnasium during the Christmas holidays. Lined for both basketball and volleyball, the floor gleams in its highly finished surface. Some of the old boards were refinished and laid as new floors in three class rooms of Students Hall and in the Music Annex.

Dr. and Mrs. Jean Piccard, both of whom have been to the stratosphere, told the college audience on January 2 of their flight, which took them more than ten miles into the air. The talks were supplemented by motion and slide pictures, which vivified the experience. Dr. Piccard has often been pictured with his identical twin brother, Prof. Auguste Piccard, also of stratosphere fame.

During their annual tour of eastern Pennsylvania the last week of January, the members of the Juniata College Choir sang in the historic Cloisters at Ephrata. The particular reason for singing there was the fact that this year the choir includes in its repertoire three hymns written by Conrad Beissel, founder of the order of monastics who lived in the Cloisters. Sung in the basement meeting room, these songs have probably not been heard for one hundred years. Original copies of the hymns, one in Beissel's handwriting, are in the Juniata Library.

Social life at Juniata will be enhanced next summer by the converting of the present Blue Room, reception room, and entrance corridor of Brumbaugh Hall into a social room. Certain architectural difficulties will have to be overcome in the way of removing partitions; but when they are, the renovation will provide a large room surrounded with alcoves suitable for social needs.

Replacing the student government which was established in 1922, the Senate is completing its first year of activity. Disciplinary duties have been delegated entirely to the faculty, and the Senate concerns itself only with constructive student activity. The organization consists of a president, vice-president, secretary, central treasurer, and the chairmen of athletics, social activities, general activities, publications, religious activities, men's and women's house, freshmen activities, and three faculty members—dean of men, dean of women, and one member at large. LeRoy S. Maxwell, of Waynesboro, has been president during this first year.

* * *

Three new professional clubs have been formed this year: the Forensic Council, whose purpose is to stimulate interest in public speaking; the Sociology Club, whose purpose is to study important social programs and agencies; and the Philosophy Circle, which discusses philosophical problems.

Two important contests were conducted during the second semester—the Bailey Oratorical Contest and the Biddle General Information Contest. The first, held on March 5 with six contestants, was won by Woods A. Robinson, a junior, of Elmira, N. Y. His oration was entitled "Be Priceless." Thirty-five students took the examination in the Biddle Contest, the winner of which was Shelley Berkeley, a freshman, of Pittsburgh.

Recent lyceum numbers have been: a concert of ballads by Earle Spicer, of New York; a concert by the Gerhart Ensemble, of Altoona, featuring the renowned flutist, Frederick Wilkins, as soloist; and a lecture by Dr. Cornelius Weygandt, professor of English at the University of Pennsylvania, on "Poets Off Parade."

ATHLETICS

BILL SCOTT

IRON MAN OF ATHLETICS

Juniata College has been fortunate to have in the last four years an Iron Man of Athletics, in the person of William ("Bill") Scott, of Clearfield. Scott has participated in every recognized intercollegiate athletic activity during his four years at Juniata and has won his letter in every sport.

Bill Scott received his early training in Clearfield High School, where in competition with boys of the Pennsylvania coal mining district and boys used to the hardships of life he built a body which every true athlete must have—one of stability, strength, and vitality. From his home he went to Dickinson Seminary, where he played football, basketball, baseball, and track during his one-year stay there. Interestingly enough, of the seven football players who graduated from Dickinson Seminary the same year four became captains of the football team in the schools to which they went. Scott was one of these four. Wasicek, an All-American tackle from Colgate, was another of that number who rose to captainship in his senior year.

Scott's first indication of becoming a dazzling intercollegiate athletic star came in the early part of the football season of Scott's freshman year. The journey to Philadelphia to play Drexel caused the regular center to become ill, and Scott was sent into the game in that responsible position to pass the ball during the entire game. His work in this game was sufficiently pleasing to Coach Swartz that Scott played a total of seventeen quarters during the 1932 season. The following year Scott became the regular center and as a sophomore holds a record which has been equalled but seldom in intercollegiate football—that of playing every minute of every game. In the 1934 season Scott almost duplicated his performance of the previous year, but a head injury in the second half of the Lebanon Valley game removed him from the game. As a senior during the 1935 season and as Captain of the team, Scott played in every quarter of every game, but was taken out for parts of two quarters of the Bridgewater game to give substitute centers opportunity for experience.

As a basketball player Scott did not break into the varsity line-up until his sophomore year. That year he played ten quarters of varsity basketball. During his junior and senior years he has been a regular on the basketball team, his unusual versatility having permitted Coach Swartz to use him in every position. Scott's pet shot on the basketball floor is a low unarched shot with lots of back-English which cuts the cords with a pleasant swish.

In the spring of his freshman year Scott took on two sports: baseball and track. He made his debut to baseball fans as a pitcher, success in which required that he drop track the following year. Scott's pitching record his freshman year was one victory and no defeats. Out of three times at bat that year, although he failed to get a hit, he crossed the plate twice. The following year Scott was utility man, playing in the pitcher's box, at shortstop, and in the outfield. That year he faced opponents' pitchers forty-nine times and cracked out twenty hits to bat in the coveted list of hitters over the 400 mark. His pitching record again that year was one victory and no defeats. As a junior Scott played regularly in left field, although he did come to the mound for one game to send the visitors down to defeat.

Scott's fourth sport to letter in was track. Throwing the discus and shot during his freshman year, he won his letter in this sport under the direction of Coach Snider.

Scott's academic work at Juniata has been in teacher preparation. He has majored in science and mathematics and hopes to secure a position next year as teacher of those subjects and as coach of athletics in some high school or preparatory school.

Who's Who Among The Juniata Alumni . . .

1879—It is rather remarkable that as the college is planning to celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of its founding, it can be reported that all of the members of the first graduating class are still living. Linnie Bosserman Grigsby, of El Reno, Okla., is interested in forming an Honorary Golden Anniversary Alumni Circle. Dr. Phoebe R. Norris, of Washington, D. C., is always on the active list of the alumni association. Dr. Gaius M. Brumbaugh, besides performing his many duties as a physician and attending the various meetings of the Juniata College Trustee board, finds time to delve into the history of the Revolutionary days. As a result he has published a book entitled, "Revolutionary War Records, Volume I, Virginia," which is a companion volume to his "Maryland Records."

* * *

1880—Mrs. W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, Pa., who suffered a light stroke of paralysis last August, is still unable to move around in the home without assistance.

* * *

1881—Dr. H. D. Rinehart has retired from his professional duties and is now managing a Court of 26 homes in Pasadena, Calif. He is also managing a fruit ranch—the Reinway Ranch of fifty acres—near Modesto, Calif.

* * *

1882—Rev. Geo. N. Falkenstein is leaving Philadelphia, where his ancestors settled 189 years ago and where he began his eight-year pastorate under the General Mission Board 43 years ago. He and his wife will make their home with their daughter near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

* * *

1883—Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Silverthorn are enjoying their new home in Sebring, Fla. Sara A. Harley has changed her address to Devon, Pa., in care of the Cathart Home. With the beginning of this year, October 1, 1935, Dr. Galen B. Royer and his wife began their second five-year term as pastor of the Morrellville Church of the Brethren, Johnstown, Pa.

* * *

1885—Mr. and Mrs. D. Ben Replogle of Berkeley, Calif., spent a greater part of the winter on a cruise which took them through Panama, Havana, and Florida.

1887—Prof. J. A. Myers, of Huntingdon, Pa., has been confined to his room for the past year during which time he has been gradually losing his physical powers until he is practically helpless. He asks for the prayers of his many Juniata friends.

* * *

1895—Ira J. Gump, of Covington, Ohio, is a salesman for the Miami Granite Co., of Piqua, Ohio. His two daughters are married: Mrs. M. B. Horner, '17, is the wife of the president of the General Alumni Association; Mrs. Ballard is employed in the First National Bank of Chicago; the two sons, Joseph, ex. '23 and Luther, ex. '21, are operating a glass and paint store in Denver, Colo. Mrs. Milda Chilcote Kyle is married and has one son who is a graduate of the dental department of the University of Pittsburgh and is now practicing with offices in East Liberty, Pittsburgh. Her husband is in the employ of the water department of Pittsburgh.

1896—John M. and Bertha Coder Elias, of Pittsburgh, have one daughter, Janet, who is a teacher in the Union High School of Turtle Creek, Pa. Mr. Elias is engaged in real estate and insurance.

1909—Aden W. Burns, principal of schools at Duncansville, Pa., has two daughters: Amy E., who is teaching in Logan Township, Blair County, Pa., and Ivy M., who is in training at the J. C. Blair Hospital. Ralph Taylor, 1207 Twelfth Street, Altoona, Pa., is agent for the Bureau of Rehabilitation in the Department of Labor and Industry of the Commonwealth.

* * *

1910—Dr. Ira M. Henderson, who is practicing medicine at Fairfield, Pa., writes that he is always interested in Juniata and her progress. His daughter, Barbara, ten years old, attends school at Gettysburg, Pa. Althea Senft Huston, of Mt. Union, Pa., is the mother of one son and four daughters. The son is manager of a store at Three Springs, Pa. Her husband owns and operates a garage.

* * *

1912—Dr. Dana Z. Eckert is principal of the H. C. Frick Training School, Pittsburgh, Pa. Foster G. Horner is superintendent of schools in Tamaqua, Pa. Besides serving as pastor of the First Church of the Brethren, Philadelphia, Rev. Ross D. Murphy is also a trustee of Juniata College. Mrs. Murphy, who will be remembered as Florence Fogelsanger, is president of the National Council of Women's Work of the Church of the Brethren.

* * *

1914—Olive Oppel Lauver, of Altoona, Pa., is a graduate of Philadelphia School of Nursing and Salem, Ohio, Business College. Her husband A. G. Lauver, is a Chrysler and Plymouth automobile dealer in Hollidaysburg. They are the parents of two prospective Juniataans. Rev. D. P. Hoover, of New Enterprise, Pa., is in the insurance business. He has a son and a daughter in the junior class of the College.

1915—J. D. Reber is an accountant for the Higbee Co., Cleveland, Ohio. His wife, Ina Crosswhite Reber, teaches mathematics at the Myron Herrick Junior High School in Cleveland. Raymond Ellis is active on the Executive Committee of the General Alumni Association and makes frequent visits to the college in behalf of the association. His business is insurance and real estate. Samuel B. Gregory of Fort Wayne, Ind., is general agent of The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., for northern Indiana. His two sons are 6 and 8 years old.

CHESTER D. FETTERHOOF ELECTED PRESIDENT JUDGE

At a formal ceremony held in the main court room of Huntingdon, Huntingdon County, Pa., Hon. Chester D. Fetterhoof was inducted into the office of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas on Monday morning, January 6, 1936. He succeeds the Hon. Thomas F. Bailey, who held this office for the past twenty years.

Judge Fetterhoof was graduated from Juniata College, Academy 1907. He then attended Dickinson Law School from which he received the degree of LL. B. in 1910. He took up the practice of law twenty-four years ago in Huntingdon County. Twenty years ago he was elected District Attorney of Huntingdon County, which office he filled continuously for twelve years.

Judge Fetterhoof has always shown a kindly disposition towards the institution of his first love, and has on many occasions given legal advice to Juniata College without charge. He served as president of the local alumni association several years ago, and was always willing to lend a hand in promoting the best interests of his Alma Mater.

1916—G. K. Beach writes that he has four children, who are all prospective Juniataans. Mrs. Beach will be remembered as Ethel Eyer. Mr. Beach is employed with the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio. In addition to his duties as principal of the Morningside and Sunnyside Public Schools of Pittsburgh, J. Foster Gehrett, is president of the local Juniata Alumni Association, and a member of the Executive Committee of the General Alumni Association.

* * *

1917—Edgar G. Diehm is in his sixteenth year as instructor of public speaking and director of dramatics and debating in the South Senior High School of Youngstown, Ohio, and is pastor of the Woodworth Church of the Brethren. Alice Brumbaugh Dove is teaching French and history in Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., besides caring for her family of one son, Frederick, 15, and one daughter, Barbara, 7. E. T. Cecil Snyder, of Confluence, Pa., is Railway Postal Clerk of the Post Office Department.

* * *

1918—Rev. H. Stover Kulp, of Nigeria, West Africa, is scheduled to be in America on furlough this year. Mary Jane Taylor continues to teach Latin in the Northeast Junior High School at Reading, Pa. Rev. Trostle P. Dick, pastor of the Coventry Church of the Brethren, near Pottstown, Pa., continues to show his alma mater by having two of his sons enrolled in Juniata this year.

* * *

1919—R. A. Mickel spent most of last summer's vacation in Columbia University. The Western Reserve Academy, Hudson, Ohio, where he is teaching, is filled to capacity. A new three-story hospital modernly equipped has just been completed on their campus. Recently he was elected to the village council. Mrs. Mickel keeps busy managing the two boys besides being president of the Woman's Club of the town. A. B. Martin, of Windber, Pa., is in the employ of the New York Life Insurance Company with offices in the U. S. National Bank Building, Johnstown, Pa.

* * *

1920—H. W. Holsinger, a lawyer in Cleveland, Ohio, was recently elected president of the Northeastern Ohio Alumni Association. Bertha C. Hall, of Trough Creek, Pa., is doing private duty nursing. William M. Wright is General Secretary for the Young Men's Christian Association in Milton, Pa.

* * *

1922—Frank Magill is in his eleventh year as Assistant County Superintendent of Huntingdon County, Pa. He has also served as the Secretary of the Huntingdon County Alumni Association since its organization in 1923. Cora Glass is teaching school at Fallen Timber, Pa. Rev. B. F. Waltz is now living in the new colonial parsonage at Hershey, where he is pastor of the Church of the Brethren.

* * *

1923—J. Harold Engle, who was an instructor in the biology department of the College for the past ten years, entered Jefferson Medical School as a student last fall. Dr. Miles Murphy, president of the Juniata College Alumni Association in Philadelphia, is teaching in the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. M. Clyde Horst is pastor of the Chicago Church of the Brethren since Sept. 1, 1935. He is also a lecturer at Bethany Biblical Seminary.

* * *

1924—Glenn A. Lehman is teaching history in the high school at Waynesboro, Pa. His one son and two daughters help to make a happy home. The social studies department of the high school at Boyertown, Pa., is headed by F. Gladys High. Dr. E. Ralph Brumbaugh is operating a private hospital at Pen Argyl, Pa.

* * *

1925—Ralph E. Kreps, of Phoenixville, Pa., is principal of the Schuylkill Township Consolidated Schools. Miriam Dugan Cole is taking postgraduate work in the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, Ill. D. Raymond Sollenberger, president of the Blair County Alumni Association, is assistant principal of the high school at Williamsburg, Pa.

* * *

1926—Henry Gibbel is fire insurance executive in Lititz, Pa. William Livengood resigned from his teaching position in the Somerset High School to fill the office of Register of Wills in Somerset County. Rev. T. F. Henry, pastor of the Roxbury Church of the Brethren in Johnstown, Pa., conducted the annual evangelistic services in the Stone Church on the campus in February.

OF ALUMNI WEEK IN THE SUMMER

Think of getting a week of vacation, including room and board, with interesting entertainment and recreation, amid the memories and associations of the old college halls—all for less than ten dollars! Why not put July 14 to 19 on your calendar as vacation week? Do you not have some friends who would be glad to know of such vacation opportunity?
